Apponto nel licentiarmi che feci da S. S. Ill$^{ma.}$ in Roma saranno hormai trè anni per venire a questa volta, a posta per attender al Vocabolario precedente, se ben m' arricordo lei mi raccommandò e non senza qualche premura la compositione d'un Vocabolario Inglese et Italiano per uso di tutta la Natione Italiana, hora in conformità del suo commando, negli intervalli della correttione e rivista del detto Vocabolario Italiano & Inglese, mi ci sono ingegnato & adoperato quanto si è potuto; e per esser che S. S. Ill$^{ma.}$ si è degnata per alcuni mesi di pigliar lettione di lingua Inglese da me in Roma, dimostrandosi sempre mai curiosissima di possederla a maggior segno, se non nell' atto prattico e discorso almeno nella lettura et intendimento, trovandola alla giornata una lingua copiosissima e concettosa assai; & tanto maggiormente quanto che, da certi anni in quà si scorge che s' è addimesticata più che mai colla lingua Latina, Italiana e Francese, per questo et altri degni rispetti hò voluto mandare a S. S. Ill$^{ma.}$ quest' opera mia col suo Honoratissimo Nome e Casato in fronte per suo maggior freggio & ornamento, acciò che dedicata alli meriti di S. S. Ill$^{ma.}$ ogni altro Italiano in essempio di lei divenisse vago di applicare a cotal lingua per scuoprirvici poi le sopraccennate delitie. In quanto poi tocca a gl' Interessi della Natione Inglese hò dedicati ambidue li Vocabolarii all' Honoratissima Compagnia de Sig$^{ri.}$ Negotianti di Turchia in Londra, concioche esse ogni tratto manda fuori li suoi gioveni, hora nelle Fattorie d' Italia, hora in quelle di Turchia & altre parti del Levante, dove la lingua Italiana serve loro di mezzo termine al negotio e traffico, e dove si hà da credere che questi Vocabolarii siano per haver ogni maggior spaccio; se l' essemplare che le invio per alcuna disgratia di fortuna di mare venisse a smarrirsi, le ne capiteranno senz' altro degli altri per altre vie, e per altre mani, ma tutti però col medisimo impronto, e sottoscrittione che me le raccorderanno in perpetuo

To all who desire to Learn the ITALIAN Tongue.

AS the precedent Dictionary is absolutely necessary for all such as are desirous to understand Italian Authors; so is this following no less useful for such as have occasion to write Italian Letters, or to Translate out of English into Italian, or otherwise to speak Italian : The want of this Piece, to the purpose aforesaid, and the earnest Solicitations thereto, of my Friends and Acquaintance abroad, have been the main Motives that have put me upon this Work ; so that I make account now the business of Italian is compleated in the two Dictionaries, as to understanding, writing, translating, and speaking, as far as a Dictionary can go. I shall not need to set forth the Trouble and Pains that I have been at, since J. Scaliger hath done it to my hand, in his Poems of Works of the like Nature, which I have placed in the Front of the foregoing Dictionary. The desire that I have had, as formerly, so chiefly in this Piece, to serve the English Nation, hath made me wave my own private Interest in many particulars, to comply with the Publick. I desire the Reader also to observe, that in this Dictionary I have shun'd and avoided (as near as could be) obsolete and forc'd words, and have chose to put only such as are obvious to the understanding, preferring good plain currant Money before gawdy Medals. In the perusal, I presume, the Reader will be sensible, that I am

Wholly his,

T	te		ti
U	u		u
X	ix		Iccaſe
Y	Ypſilon, y. greca, fio.		Iſſilon
Z	Zeta.		Zeta.

Such as have not the benefit of a Maſter, muſt peruſe the following Obſervations, before they pronounce this well.

The ITALIAN Letters are Twenty.

A b c d e f g h i l m n o p q r s t u z.

Inſtead of x. we uſe ſingle or double ſſ. or c. ſaying Aleſſandro, not Alexandro, Serſe not Xerxe,Eccitare,not excitare, but Xanto a mans name is written with an x. to diſtinguiſh it from Santo holy.

A.

IS ſounded broad, as in the Engliſh word, pawn, pane bread, ſound pawne.

C.

BEfore a. o. u. is ſounded as Engliſh K. Before e. or i. as Engliſh ch. as in the words, cherry, children; céna, a ſupper,ſound chéna; città, ſound chittà, a City; ch. is always pronounced as k. in Engliſh, and if c. come double before the (h.) or before a, o, u. ſound them ſmartly; ſpécchi, looking glaſſes, vácca a Cow, ſtrácco weary, ſound ſpekky, vakka, ſtrakko, but if before e. or i. the firſt e. muſt have a touch of a t. eccettuáre, ſound etchettuáre, to except, ſtrácci, ſound ſtratchi, rags.

E.

SOmetimes is pronounc'd open; fiéle gall, as in the Engliſh word, mealy, ſometimes cloſe, béllo fair, ſound as in the Engliſh word, mellow. The pronunciation of theſe is beſt gotten by the ear.

G.

BEfore, a, o, u. as in Engliſh,but before e, or i. as an Engliſh j conſonant, género, a ſon in law, ſound jénero, girándola, a circle, or fire work, ſound jeerándola. If it come between two vowels,the latter of which is either (e) or (i): it is pronounc'd as if a (d) were before it, vigilánte, sound vidgilánte, watchful; regénte, sound redgénte, regent, or in government, as in the English words, wedge, or ridge.

If it come double before a, o, u. the same as in English, only a little stronger, and if double before (e) or (i) the same as when single before (e) or (i) only forcing of it a little more, as in the words Légge, Luiggi, sound Ledgé, Luidgi.

If (h) come between, g, and i, or g, and e, then g. is pronounc'd as gue, or, gui, in English, in the words guest, or, guide, bottéghe shops, sound bottegue, luóghi, places, found, logui.

If it come before (l) then it is melted into another (l) figlio, a son sound, fillio, except in these words, Inglese, globo, negligenza, neglétto, conglutináre, where the sound is the same as in English.

If it come before (n) it is melted as it were into another (n) and as if an (i) should follow the latter, régno, sound rénnio.

The English words, onion, and companion, will humour this pronunciation.

Gua, gue, gui, are sounded as gwa, gwe, gwi, guastáre, to spoyl, sound gwastare, guércio, blear eyed, sound gwércio, guida a guide, sound gwida.

H.

IN it self is no Letter, but rather a note of distinction to avoid equivocation, as appears in (ci) us, from (chi) who (ce) us, from, (che) which, ánno, a year, from hánno, they have.

Ai, to the, from (hai) thou hast (á) to, from (há) he hath.

Amo, I love, from hámo, a fish hook.

Giáccio, I lie down, from ghiáccio, ice, véggia a vessel, from végghia, a watching.

I.

IS sounded as English (ee) minimo, the least, sound meénimo.

It is never used by good Italians as a consonant, but instead of it (g) is put before it, saying, Giovánni, John, not Jovánni, Gioséppe, Joseph, not Joséppe.

O.

SOmetimes is pronounc'd open, as tórre,to take away, sound as in the English word, torrent, sometimes close, as torre, a tower, as in the English word, turret, or near upon that sound.

The general observations of the close (o) are these that follow.

1. Where (ó) is accented it is close as, amò he loved.

2. Words ending in óne, óra, óre, óro, óso,Oratióne,prayer, qualhóra, sometimes, Signóre, Lord, or Sir, colóro, those, amoróso, amorous, except when (u) goes before, as buóno good, then it is pronounc'd as in the English word, bone, cuóre, a heart, as in the English word, kore, of fruit.

3. If it come before l. m. n. r. it is close, cólmo top full, Roma, Rome, pónta, a point, tóndo round, except when i. or u. comes before it, as chióma a head of hair, Duómo a Cathedral Church.

4. If it come before gn. it is close,as Bológna,sound bolónnia,by these may be guest any other observation of the close (o.) And where it doth not come within the compass of these observations, it is to be sounded open.

Q.

IS ever pronounc'd, as English, k. when (c) goes before it, and smartly, piacque, it pleased, ácqua water, sound piackwe, ackwa,otherwise as the English in questo as in the word Inquest.

S.

COmming between two vowels is sounded like a (z) misero, sound mizero, miserable, desio, sound dezio a desire, except cosi, so altresi, also, and all words that have (si) added to them,as, scrivesi,it is written,where its sound is natural.(Sce) or (sci) pronounced as, sh. scélta, choice, sound shelta,scintilla, a spark, sound shintilla. Before c. f. p. t. it is pronounced also in its natural sound,as, scála a ladder or pair of stairs, sfacciáto brazen-fac'd, véspa, a wasp, stúdio, a study or University, but before d. g. l. m. n. r. u. as z. as sbárra, a fence, sdégno disdain, sguárdo a look, slattáre to wean, smánia madness, frowardness, snodáre to untie, sradicare to pluck up by the roots, sventurato misfortunate.

T.

WOrds that have tia,tie,or tio, tii,in the middle or ending, are pronounced as ts, as grátia,sound grátsia,grace,grátie, sound grátsie graces, ótio, ótsio idleness, vitii, vitsii vices, except, ambastia an Ecstasie, saettia, a pinnace, malatia,a sickness, questióne a questio, quistióne,a quarrel, moléstia, trouble, s. preceding t: tiene, he holdeth, potiáte, ye may be able, patiámo, we may suffer, patiáte, ye may suffer, and some other verbs, which use will discover.

V.

SOund as, oo, in English, lúna, sound lóóna, the moon, and and when it is a consonant, then it ought to be character'd thus, v. and is pronounced as in English, as vitio, virtù, vice, vertue.

Z.

WHen it comes single betwixt two vowels, is pronounc'd as if a (d) were before it, mézo, sound medzo the middle, azúro, sound adzúro blew.

If it come double between two vowels, then it is pronounc'd as ts. bellézza, sound bellétsa beauty.

If it come after l. n. r. it is also sounded as (ts) milza, sound miltsa, the spleen, ronzino, sound rontsino a Nag, forza, sound fortsa strength.

Divers words that begin with z. are pronounc'd with the sound of ts. others with ds. as zío sound tsio, an uncle, zóppo, sound, tsóppo, lame, zéro, sound dséro the figure of nought in Arithmetick.

The letters b. d. f. l. m. n. p. r. are pronounced as in the English; instead of (k) we use (ch) instead of (ph) (f)

And thus much for Pronunciation, which being observed, with the Accents, there will be no difficulty in pronouncing the language, for generally the Italian tongue is pronounced as it is written, and written as it is pronounced, without losing any letter or syllable.

Observations.

ALL our words for the most part end in vowels, as ánima, the soul, féde faith, or trust, Luiggi, Lewis, corpo, a body, virtù vertue.

Yet observe that E. or O.are not pronounc'd when they follow l. n. r. and often not exprest in writing,nor sometimes when they follow t. d. or m. as for example.

Mo.	habbiam hormai finito.	We have at last made an end, not habbiamo.
Le.	Un mal non vien solo.	A mischief comes not alone,not male.
Lo.	Bel tempo fà.	It is fair weather, not bello.
Ne.	Per raggion di stato.	Out of State Policy, not raggióne.
No.	Di buon ingegno.	Of a good wit, not Buono.
Re.	Muor di vóglia.	He dies with longing, not Muóre.
Ro.	Il ver odiato.	The truth hated, not Vero.
Te.	Fra Bernardo.	Brother Bernard, for Frate.
De.	Gran Soggeto.	An eminent man, not Grande.
To.	San Pietro.	Saint Peter, not Santo.

But if they end the sentence, they are written at length.

Observe that these words are never abbreviated.

Apollo	the God Apollo.
Chiaro	clear.
Duro	hard.
Oscuro	obscure.

The uſe of theſe articles may be underſtood by the following obſervations.

Il, and lo, ſerve to the maſculine ſingular, i. and gli, to the maſculine plural.

La, to the feminine ſingular.

Le, to the feminine plural.

As, Il cavallo, a horſe, &c. li cavalli, horſes.

Lo Spirito, a ſpirit, gli ſpirti, ſpirits.

La ſcala, a ladder, le ſcale, ladders.

Il, is uſed before words, beginning with a ſingle conſonant, as il cavallo, a horſe, il libro, a book, and ſo is, li, as li cavalli, Horſes; but if the following word begins with an l. i is uſed for better ſound ſake, i libri, not li libri, books.

Lo, is uſed before words beginning with a double conſonant, the firſt whereof is an s, as lo ſpirito, a ſpirit, lo ſtrale, an arrow or dart. It is alſo uſed before words beginning with a vowel, and then it is contracted thus, l'amore, love, l'odio, hatred.

Gli, is uſed before words beginning with a double conſonant, as hath been ſaid of lo; and alſo before words beginning with a vowel, as gli amori, the loves, gli honori, the honours: but before i, it is contracted, as gl' inimici, the enemies, gl' infedeli, the infidels.

I, is uſed before words, beginning with a ſingle conſonant, as i fiori, the flowers, i fiati, the blaſts, i libri, the books.

La, is uſed before words beginning with either ſingle or double conſonants, la torre, the tower, la ſpada, the ſword; but if before a vowel, then it is uſually contracted thus; l' anima, the ſoul, l' arte, the trade, or art.

Le, uſed before words beginning with either ſingle, or double conſonants, as, le torri, the towers, le ſpade, the ſwords, but if before a vowel, it may either be contracted, or not, ſaying, l' inimicitie, the enmities, or le inimicitie.

La, le, li, lo, coming after de, a, da, ne, double their l, as dello, of the, not de lo, allo to the, not a lo, dallo, from the, not da lo, nella, in the, not ne la, unleſs in poetry.

Obſerve that, il, and lo, ſometimes relate to perſons, ſometimes to things, and ſignify him, or that, as il vedo, I ſee him, or ſee that, lo vedo, I ſee him, or that.

Gli, and li, likewiſe relate to perſons, or things either in the ſingular, or plural number.

Gli parlai, I ſpake to him.

Gli ſentii, I heard them.

Gli hò venduti quei libri, I have ſold him thoſe books.

Li mandai avviſo, I ſent him advice.

Li ſcopettai ben bene quei veſtimenti, I bruſht thoſe clothes very well.

Li viddi tutti quanti affogare, I ſaw them every one drowned.

Il, la, li, le, before, mio, tuo, ſuo, noſtro, voſtro, loro, &c. have no ſignification; and ſerve only for ornament, as with the Greeks, il mio capello, my hat, la mia fruſta, my whip.

Obſerve that e. is gracefully put between gli, and lo, gli, and la, gli, and li, gli, and le, gli, and ne.

Glielo, to him it, maſculine.

Gliela, to him it, feminine.

Glieli, to him them, maſculine.

Gliele, to him them, feminine.

Gliene, to him thereof, or therewith. And moſt commonly, it is uſed ſpeaking to men; but ſometimes to women: And this to avoid repetition, as menò certi cani all' Imperatore, & preſentoglieli, or preſentogliene, he brought certain dogs to the Emperour and preſented them him, or him therewith, to avoid, ſaying, menò certi cani all' Imperatore, e quelli preſentò a lui, he brought certain dogs to the Emperour, and them preſented unto him.

Obſerve that la and le ſometimes relate to perſons, ſometimes to things, as hath been hinted upon li, l' arma Io la tengo forte, the weapon I hold it faſt, le vedi quelle arme? doſt ſee thoſe weapons? è poco, non le baſta, Its little, it is not ſufficient for you, le, being a contract of álei, which implies as much as, to her, to your Lordſhip, or Ladyſhip, &c. le bacio le mani, I kiſs your Lordſhips, or Ladyſhip's hands.

Obſerve that, mi. ci. ti. vi. ſi. coming before, la. lo. li. le. ne. change i, into e.

Saying inſtead of

mi lo	me lo	me la	me li	me le	me ne
ci lo	ce lo	ce la	ce li	ce le	ce ne
ti lo	te lo	te la	te li	te le	te ne
vi lo	ve lo	ve la	ve li	ve le	ve ne
ſi lo	ſe lo	ſe la	ſe li	ſe le	ſe ne

The indefinit Articles (Di) of (A) to (Da) from or by, whether applied to perſon or place.

Note that the difference of the Finit article and the indefinite is chiefly comprehended in this point.

The definite article repreſents a thing limited and reſtrained, the Indefinite leaves it in its full extent, as un ſervitor di Principe a Princes ſervant, ſpeaking of any Prince in general, not limited to any one particular Prince: But un ſervitor del Principe, is a ſervant of the Prince, where is meant ſome particular Prince, and ſo conſequently of the reſt of the articles.

The terminations of nouns ſubſtantives and adjectives, which are our declenſions.

A.

Words ending in a. in the ſingular, make e. in the plural, and are feminines, la porta, a gate, le porte, gates.

Except names of offices and dignities, which are maſculine and make i. in the plural, as il profeta, a prophet, li profeti, prophets; but if it be accented then it is the ſame in the plural, as in the ſingular, whether maſculine, or feminine, as la città, a city, le città, citties, il Poteſtà, a governour li Poteſtà, governours: ſome have two plurals, ala, a wing, ale, or ali, wings, arma, a weapon, arme, or armi, weapons.

E.

Makes i in the plural, whether maſculine, or feminine, il piede, a foot, li piedi, feet, la mente, the mind, le menti, minds; bue, an oxe, makes buoi.

Note, that ſome words are both maſculine and feminine.

Sottile, ſmall.
Poſſibile, poſſible.
Corteſe, courteous, &c.

Saying, il, or, la fune, a rope, li, or, le funi, ropes, and ſo of the reſt.

Il conſorte corteſe, a courteous husband.

Li conſorti corteſi, courteous husbands.

La conſorte corteſe, a courteous wife.

Le conſorti corteſi, courteous wives.

Il, li, la and le, making only the difference.

Note alſo, that words ending in ie, make the ſame in the plural, as in the ſingular.

La effigie, the effigies, pl. le effigie, the effigies.

La ſpecie, the kind, pl. le ſpecie, the kinds.

La ſuperficie, the ſuperficies, le ſuperficie, the ſuperficies.

La temperie, the ſeaſon, or temperament.

Le temperie, the ſeaſons, or temperaments.

But moglie, a wife, makes, mogli wives.

And mille, a thouſand, makes, mila, thouſands.

I.

Makes i. in the plural.

Il pari, the like, pl. li pari, maſculine.

La pari, the like, pl. le pari, feminine.

Il dì, a day, li dì, days.

Indeed all words that have an accent on them, are the ſame in the plural, as in the ſingular, and are only diſtinguiſhed by the article.

O.

Makes i. in the plural, and are all maſculines, but mano, a hand, la mano, a hand, le mani hands.

Il cavallo, a horſe, li cavalli horſes.

Il Regno, a Kingdom, li Regni, Kingdoms.

Some words have their ſingular, both in (o) and in (e) as corriero, or corriere, a Poſt that carries letters, Cavagliero, or Cavagliere, a Gentleman, or Knight, penſiero, or penſiere, a thought, deſtriero, or deſtriere, a ſteed, vermo, or verme, a worm.

Words ending in io, make their plural by taking away o, as occhio, an eye, occhi, eyes, ſavio, a wiſe man, ſavi, wiſe men, ſacrificio, a ſacrifice, ſacrifici, ſacrifices, ufficio, a duty, uffici, duties, ſpecchio, a looking-glaſs, ſpecchi, looking-glaſſes, uſuraio, an uſurer, uſurai, uſurers, except, eſſercitio, an exerciſe, eſſercitii, exerciſes, tempio, a temple, tempii, temples, vitio, a vice, plur. vitii, vices, martirio, martyrdom, martirii, martyrdoms; to make a diſtinction between tempo, time, which makes in the plural, tempi, times, eſſercito, an army, eſſerciti, armies, vite, a vine, viti, vines, martire, a martyr, martiri, martyrs.

Note that, huomo a man, makes in the plural, huomini, men.

Tuo, thine, plural, tuoi, thine, and ſome words, ending in lo, make gli, in the plural, as capello, a hair, capegli, hairs, or head of hair, quello that, quegli thoſe, &c.

V.

Makes u, in the plural, as, la virtù, vertue, le virtù, vertues.

La grù, a crane, le grù, cranes.

Obſerve, that nouns ending in co, ca, go, ga, make their plurals, in chi, che, ghi, ghe, as,

Giuoco, a game, pl. giuochi, games.

Parca, one of the fatal ſiſters, pl. parche, fatal ſiſters.

Luogo, a place, pl. luoghi, places.

Piaga, a ſore, pl. piaghe, ſores.

Except.

Medico, a phyſician, pl. medici, phyſicians.

Veſtimento, a garment, pl. i veſtimenti, or le veſtamenta, garments.
Vovo, an egg, pl. gli uovi, or le uova, eggs.

Obſerve that feminines are made of maſculines, by turning o. into a, as amico, a hee-friend, amica, a ſhee-friend; bello, fair, maſculine ; bella, fair, feminine. And generally nouns ending in a, are feminines, except ſome few, as Duca, a Duke, Podeſta, a magiſtrate, boia, an executioner, &c.

All nouns ending in anza, enza, trice, and one, are of the feminine gender, as abondanza, plenty, Patienza, patience, ballatrice, a woman dancer, except poltrone, a coward, ſalone, a great Hall, boccone, a morſel.

All nouns ending in o, and ore, are of the maſculine gender, as amico, a friend, il latore, the bearer, except mano, a hand.

Theſe following nouns are ſeldom uſed, but in the plural.

Gl' ampleſſi, embraces.
Le carezze, dalliances, or careſſes.
Le forbici, ſheers.
Le nozze, nuptials.
Le faccoltà / Le richezze } riches.
Merci, wares.

The ſcale how to make nouns ſignifie more or leſs, better or worſe, in their ſeveral ſignifications.

Otto. Nouns ending in otto, declare the thing to be handſomly big, indifferently likely, as capello, a hat, capellotto, a pretty big hat.

One. Nouns ending in one, declare the thing ſomething exceeding proportion, yet not ugly or deſpicable, as capello, a hat ; capellone, a good big hat.

Accio. Nouns ending in accio, declare the thing not only to exceed proportion, but contemptible withal, as capello, a hat ; capellaccio, an ugly great hat.

Etto. Nouns ending in etto declare the ſmallneſs and prettineſs of the thing, as capello, a hat ; capelletto, a pretty little hat.

Ino. Nouns ending in ino declare the thing yet ſmaller and prettier, as capello, a hat ; capelino, a very pretty little hat.

Vccio ; or Uzzo. Nouns ending in uccio or uzzo, declare the thing to be of the leaſt and abſolutely deſpicable and contemptible, as capello, a hat ; capelluccio, or capelluzzo, a little ſorry ill-favoured hat.

And ſo in a thouſand other examples, which is a very great liberty of the Language.

Now as hath been ſaid of a maſculine Noun, the like may be of a feminine, making of it to end in a, as cavalla, a mare ; cavallotta, cavallona, cavallaccia, cavalletta, cavallina, cavalluccia, or cavalluzza.

Moſt of the nick names are made to run upon this termination, as by way of detraction, as Minicuccio, from Dominico, a mans name ſo call'd ; Minicuccia from Dominicuccia, a womans name ſo call'd ; Carlo, Charles ; Carluccio, little Charles, Anna, Anne ; Annuccia, little Nan ; though ſome run otherwiſe, as Checco for Franceſco, as Frank for Francis, Checca for Franceſca, Frank for Frances, Mas for Tomaſo, Tom for Thomas ; as Mas Aniello, for Tomaſo Aniello, a name ſufficiently noted in Naples.

Obſerve, that if the noun that you would diminiſh end in no, na, or re, ra, by making the ſame end in ello, if maſculine ; in ella, if feminine, you expreſs a kind of prettineſs of the ſame, as aſino, an aſs, aſinello, a little pretty aſs ; aſina, a ſhee-aſs ; aſinella, a pretty ſhee-aſs.

Paſtore, a ſhepherd ; paſtorello, a little ſhepherd ; paſtora, a ſhepherdeſs ; paſtorella, a little pretty ſhepherdeſs.

Some diminutives are alſo made to end in uolo, uola, uolino, uolina ; as pezzo, a piece, or while of time ; pezzuolo, a little piece, or while of time ; pezzuolino, a very little piece, or ſmall while of time ; alſo pezza, a piece, clout, or handkerchief ; pezzuolina, a very ſmall piece, &c. Alſo Chieſa, a Church, Chieſuola, a little Church ; Chieſuolina, a very little Church, or Chapel.

Some alſo end in eſſa, as Dottore, a Doctor ; Dottoreſſa, a ſhe-Doctor ; Medicheſſa, a ſhe-Phyſician, from Medico, a Phyſician.

Obſerve, that nouns ending in ne, by taking away the laſt vowel, and adding cello to it, you expreſs the ſmallneſs and prettineſs of the ſame ; as limone, a limon ; limoncello, a ſmall limon. The like if you add, cino, to it, as limoncino, a ſmall limon. If the noun end in na, then caſt away the (a) and put cina to it, and you expreſs the ſmallneſs and prettineſs of it ; as corona, a crown ; coroncina, a pretty little crown.

Obſerve, that if you make a feminine noun to end in one, you expreſs the bigneſs of it, and in a good ſence ; as bel ſalone, a fair great Hall, from ſala, a Hall ; che bel piazzone, what a fair great place ? from piazza, a place.

Obſerve, that ſometimes a diminutive is uſed after the augmentative, as homacciuolo, a little ſorry man; donnacciuola, a little ſorry woman ; and this is uſed in an ill ſence : yet homacciotto, a well-ſet man, is uſed indifferently. Alſo, two diminutives are ſometimes put together, to expreſs the greater diminution or prettineſs of the thing ; camerettina, a little cloſet, or chamber ; ſonettino, a little ſmall ſonnet, or ditty.

Obſerve, that ſuch as end in o, or rather in ro, commonly make their diminutive to end in etto, as bianco, white, bianchetto, whitiſh ; chiaro, clear, chiaretto, cleariſh, or pretty clear ; duro, hard, duretto, hardiſh, or pretty hard.

Obſerve that nouns ending in eſco, or eſca, are much like the words ending in iſh in Engliſh : donneſco, womaniſh : fanciulleſca, childiſh.

Obſerve that by putting ggiare, or zare, to any noun, ſignifying perſon, office, beaſt, or any creature, you expreſs the quality, nature, action or condition of that thing, perſon or creature : as pavone, a Peacock : pavoneggiare, to play the Peacock : Paſqua Eaſter : Paſqueggiare, to keep Eaſter : Volpe a Fox, Volpeggiare, to play the Fox. Pavonezzare, paſquezzare, volpezzare, are the ſame, but not ſo frequent in that termination.

Obſerve, that verbs that are made to end in acchiare are meant in an ill ſenſe, and by way of diſparagement : vivacchiare, to live hardly, to rub out : ſonnacchiare, to ſlumber, to be drawſy out of lazineſs ; ſcrivacchiare, to ſcribble ; pacchiare to feed like a hog. But this caution, muſt be had, that in i-imitation of these observations one be bold, but not too bold, for the ear and custom must be conductors herein, or else it is possible to mistake, as custom says, homicino, or homicciuolo, for a little man, not hometto: donniciuola, rather than donnetta, a little woman, though donnina is much in use: terricciuola, a little town, rather than terrina, or terretta: vecchierello, a little old man, rather than vecchietto, or vecchino: muricciuolo, a little wall rather than muretto: fettarella, a little slice, rather than fettina, or fettetta: tortorella, a turtle dove, rather than tortorina: arditello, a little bold-face: frascarello, a wagg, rather than arditino, or frascchetto: testicciuola, a little head of any beast: but testina a little head of any person, or little head in cuts or ingravures. Good attention must master this difficulty.

Observe, that words ending in ame, the kind or extream quantity is express'd thereby, as bestiame, all manner of cattel: pollame, all manner of poultry: uccellame, all manner of birds: legname, all manner of timber: rottame, all manner of rubbish: ossame, all manner of bones: carname, all manner of flesh, or any carcase.

Of the degrees of comparison.

Buono, good.
Megliore, better.
Ottimo, / Buonissimo, } best.
Bene, well.
Meglio, better.
Benissimo, / Ottimamente, } most excellent well.
Cativo.
Peggiore, worse.
Pessimo, / Malissimo, } worst of all.
Male, ill.
Peggio, worse.
Pessimamente, most ill, or in the worst manner that may be.
Grande, great.
Maggiore, / Più grande, } greater.
Grandissimo, / Massimo, } most great.
Grandemente, greatly.
Maggiormente, the rather, or more especially.
Massimamente, most especially.
Piccolo, little.
Minore, / Più piccolo, } lesser.
Piccolissimo, / Minimo, } least, most little.
Inferiore, beneath, inferiour.
Supremo, highest.
Infimo, lowest.
Poco, little.
Meno, / Manco, } less.
Pochissimo, the fewest of, or extream little.
Alto, high.
Più alto, more high.
Altissimo, / Sommo, } most high, highest.
Molto, much, or very.
Più, more.
Moltissimo, exceeding much, very much, if plur. exceeding many.

Observe, that the general way of comparing is by più, or meno, more or less, as più dotto, more learned; men dotto, less learned; and that either di, del, che, or che non follows; as Egli è più avventurato di me, He is more fortunate than I.

Egli è più accorto del compagno, He is more wary than his fellow-partner.

Egli parla più che nessuno, He speaks more than any body.

Hanno più guai che non credono, They have more sorrows than they believe.

The like if you put meno instead of più, as Egli è men avventurato di me, He is less fortunate than I, &c. The same of meglio and peggio, better and worse; as Egli scrive peggio di nessuno, He writes worse than any body; Parla meglio di tutti, He speaks better than them all.

In certe cose riesce meglio del solito, In some things he comes off better than usual; In certe altre peggio, In some others worse.

La prattica fà meglio che la teorica semplice, The practice is better than meer theory.

Gl' Inglesi parlano meglio la lingua Italiana che non faino i Francesi, The English speak better the Italian Language than the Frenchmen: Ma pronontiano poi la lingua Latina peggio che non fanno loro, But then they pronounce the Latin tongue worse than they do.

Observe, that by putting
Molto, / Assai, / Vià, / Viè, } You express the same which in English, far, or much.
Molto più ricco, Far more rich.
Assai più letterato, Much more learned.
Vie / Via } più spedita, much more ready, nimble. And then di, del, che, or che non, may follow, as occasion serves.
Indeed viè, or via, are not so frequently used as assai and molto.

The superlative, or highest degree is exprest as followeth.

Put il or la to più or meno, as,
Il più dotto di tutti, The learnedst of all.
Il men ricco, The least rich of all.
La più bella di tutte, The handsomest of all.
La men bella, The ill-favouredst of all, or the least handsome.

Again, put to words denoting quality, issimo, or issima, and you express the superlative.

Buono, good; buonissimo, best, or most good, masc. Buona, good; buonissima, best, or most good, fem.

Utile, profitable; utilissimo, most profitable.

Dotto, learned; dottissimo, most learned.

Again, double words together, and according to the signification of the word you may express the superlative of the same; as.

Quale volete dire di quelle Signore, quella bella bella? Which do you mean of those Ladies, she who is so extream handsome? Che hà li denti bianchi bianchi: Who hath such infinite white teeth; E li capegli biondi biondi, and infinite fair hair.

Also, by quello, quella, quelli, quelle, &c. and maggiore or minore, according as the sense imports, you express a superlative, Tornate con quella maggior prestezza che potete, Come with the greatest speed you can.

Also, ogni and maggiore imply all possible, as con Ogni maggior diligenza, With all possible diligence.

Observe, that by putting il, lo, or la, to any superlative in issimo or issima, and you make as it were yet a further degree; as by super-excellency it is said of God Almighty, L' Altissimo, the highest.

Observe, that by changing the last letter of the word ending in issimo into amente, you express an excess in quality: as sicurissimo, most sure: sicurissimamente, most assuredly: perfettissimo, most perfect: perfettissimamente, most perfectly.

Sing. fem. La mia, my, &c.
Plur. Le mie, my, &c. following the rules of that termination.

Sing. masc.
Il tuo, thy.
Del tuo, of thy.
Al tuo, to thy.
Dal tuo, from thy.

Plur.
I, or li tuoi, thy.
De', or delli tuoi, of thy.
Ai, or or Alli tuoi, to thy.
Dai, or dalle tuoi, from thy.

Sing. fem. La tua, thy, &c. Plur. Le tue, thy.

Sing. masc.
Il suo, his.
Del suo, of his.
Al suo, to his.
Dal suo, from his.

Plur.
I, or li suoi, his.
Dei, or delli suoi, of his.
Ai, or alli suoi, to his.
Dai, or dalli suoi, from his.

Sing. fem. La sua, hers.
Plur. Le sue, hers.

Singular. mascul. Il nostro, our, &c.

Plural. I, or li, nostri, our, &c.

Singular. mascul. Il vostro, your.

Plural. I, or li vostri, your.

The feminines are made by changing (o) into (a) as nostro, nostra, vostro, vostra, Sing. nostre, vostre, plur. as hath been shewn of la mai, la tua, le mie, le tue; as la mia casa, my house; le mie case, my houses.

1. Observe, that if mio, tuo, suo, mia, tua, sua, end not a period, that they are pronounc'd as it were in one sound, as e mio pensiero, It is my fancy or invention; e pensier mio, it is my care and duty, &c. The like in Dio, God, Dio voglia, God grant; Volesse Dio, Would to God.

2 That il mio, il tuo, il suo, il nostro, il vostro, il loro, being put without addition, signifies, my wealth or estate, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; possedo il mio, I enjoy my own; and Egi possede il suo, He enjoys his own.

3 Pronouns possessive must ever have the Article especially beginning a sentence la mia casa, not mia casa, my house, il mio cavallo, not mio cavallo, my horse.

4 Observe, that i nostri, i vostri, i miei, i suoi, is meant nearest friends, kindred, or domesticks, viz. dwelling in the same houshold.

5 Observe, that speaking of two, or of more, whether men, or women, loro is indifferent to either; as,

Il loro ben stare, your welfare.

Da alcuni, from or by ſome men or things.

Sing. f.
Alcuna, ſome woman or thing.
D' alcuna, of ſome woman or thing.
Ad alcuna, to ſome woman or thing.
Da alcuna, from or by ſome woman or thing.

Plur. fem.
Alcune, ſome women or things.
D' alcune, of ſome women or things.
Ad alcune, to ſome women or things.
Da alcune, from or by ſome women or things.

Ogn' uno, every body, will have no addition, therefore beware of ſaying, Ogn' un huomo, Every man; Ogn' un cavallo, Every horſe.

Ciaſcuno, maſc. / Ciaſcuna, fem. — Each, or every; may be without addition, or with, as Queſto lo sà ciaſcuno, Every body knows this; or, Ciaſcun huomo sà queſto, Every man knows this.

Ogni, every, indifferent to perſon or thing, maſculine, or feminine, and is ever in the ſingular number, except before numbers; as, Ogni ſei meſi, Every ſix months, or Ogni ſanti, All Saints; the Feaſt ſo called.

Ogni maggiore, and ogni qualunque, is as much as to ſay, all poſſible, or all manner of; Venite con ogni maggior preſtezza, Come with all poſſible diligence; Lo farò con ogni qualunque ſtromento, I'll do it with all, or any manner of inſtrument.

tutti / tutte / tutta / tutto — Obſerve, that putting quanto, quanti, or quante, as occaſion ſerves, to either, you expreſs all without the leaſt exception, as I quattrini che egli haveva, ſe gli è giuocati tutti quanti, The moneys he had, he hath play'd them all away to the laſt penny, Egli venne dal giuoco di palla corda tutto quanto ſudato, He came from the Tennis-Court all over in a ſweat.

Quanti, ſignifies as many as; Gli fermorono quanti erano, They ſtaid them, or ſtopt them, as many as there were of them.

Quanto alone, without addition, ſignifies, As much as; Dimandate quanto fà di biſogno, Ask as much as is needful.

Alquanto / Alquanti / Alquanta / Alquante — ſignifies ſome; alquanto tempo, ſome time; alquanti huomini, ſome men; alquante gente, ſome people; alquante caſe, ſome houſes.

Alquanto, ſomewhat; without addition; Stà alquanto meglio, He is ſomewhat better.

Alquanto, ſome, or a part of any thing; Alquanto di pane, a part or piece of bread.

Quale, sometimes expresses a way of similitude; as Egli qual filosofo arguto disputa, He disputes like a cunning Philosopher.

E le baccio le mani qual servitore humilissimo, And I kiss your hands in the nature of your most humble servant.

Masc. Nissuno, }
Fem. Nissuna, } No one.

Masc. Veruno, No one, or any one.

Fem. Veruna, No one or any one, may be applyed either to persons or things; Nissun cavaglier più garbato, No Gentleman more compleat; Nissuna dama più leggiadra, No Lady more accomplish'd; Non c' è veruna cosa che stii bene costi, There is not any thing that is as it should be yonder.

Nulla, } signifie nothing, or any thing; Dico niente, I say
Niente, } nothing; Volete niente, Will you have any thing?

Nullo, as in English null, of no effect; Il suo Testamento fù nullo, His Will and Testament was null, of no effect.

Observe that non joyn'd to nulla or niente, denies the more; Non voglio niente, I will have nothing at all; Non hò gustato niente a modo mio, I have tasted nothing at all to my liking.

7.

Pronouns Conjunctive or particles so called.

Ci	to us
gli	to him or them
la	her or it
le	them, to her, or to it
li	to him or them
lo	him or it
mi	to me or me
ne	to us or us
si	to himself or to her self, himself or herself
ti	to thy self or thy self
vi	to your self, or your self.

If either of these come before any words, they are written apart; if after, they are incorporated into the same word, the example will clear it; Ci scrive, he writes unto us; Scriveci, &c.

Observe, that if one command by way of forbiddance, then the particle precedes; as, Non vi accostate più a questa casa per quanto vi è cara la vita, Come no more near his house, as as you tender your life, not Non accostatevi, &c. But if one invite or pray, then the particle is put after, and incorporated as aforesaid; as, Accostatevi al foco, Draw near to the fire; il, signifying him, is put before words, not after; Il viddi, I saw him, not viddi il.

Observe, that when a word that is usually marked with an accent hath any of the aforesaid particles added unto it, or incorporated with it, instead of expressing the accent, the letter of the particle is doubled, and the accent omitted; Lo farò, I will or shall do it; farollo: mi amò, he lov'd me, amommi.

Observe, that when these particles are coupled together, they change i into e, whether they come before the word, or after; coglierséla, to steal away secretly, or slink, not coglier sila; se la colse, he stole away, not si la colse.

Avvedutosene, being aware of it, not avvedutosine; se n' avvidde, he was aware of it, non si n' avvidde. See more to this purpose in the Table at the end of my Introduction in octavo.

Of Verbs.

All our verbs in Imitation of the Latins are ranged in four squadrons by them named Conjugations.

1. Those of the first squadron in the infinitive end in are, with the accent on the last vowel but one as amáre, to love, portáre, to carry.

2. Those of the second squadron in the infinitive end in ere, with the accent over the last (e) saving one, as havére, to have, godére to enjoy.

3. Those of the third squadron in the infinitive end in ere, with the accent over the last vowel saying two, as córrere to run, léggere, to read.

4. Those of the fourth squadron in the Infinitive end in ire, with the accent over the last vowel saving one, as dormíre, to sleep, moríre, to die.

Of these verbs most are reducible to certain orders and are termed Regular; those which vary or are defective are termed Irregular.

All verbs are either Active, Transitive, Passive, Reciprocal, Personal or Impersonal, which are immediately known to such as have insight into the Latin tongue; others may be pleased to learn them by rote out of my Introduction in octavo, for here I intend to be as brief as may be.

Now because some tenses of all verbs are conjugated either with the participle and help of the auxiliar verb, havere, or else with the participle and auxiliar verb, essere, Note that Active and transitive verbs, that is to say, that pass into the subject treated, meant or spoken of, use the help of the auxiliar verb havere, saying. Io ho veduti e letti molti libri. I have seen and read many books; e ci hò truovate moltissime cose curiose. And I found therein very many curious things.

Passive or Reciprocal verbs, that is to say, that return into themselves, with these particles, mi, ti, ci, vi, which answer unto Io, tù, lui, noi, loro, use ever the help of the Auxiliar verb essere, saying, Io mi sono rallegrato del vostro ben stare. I have rejoyc'd at your welfare, e voi vi sete doluto del mio, and you have griev'd at mine; noi ci siamo accostati a lui e voi vi sete vergognati di farlo, We drew near unto him, and ye were ashamed to do it. Potere, to be able, and volere, to be willing; may in a manner come in as auxiliary verbs, in as much as they are great helps to conjugate most verbs.

The Scheam of the Auxiliar Verbs, Havére and éssere, may be as followeth.

The English of the third and fourth Conjugation is not exprest, for as much as it is easie to be made by the example of the two first.

Observations about the Use of the Tenses.

1 In the three last conjugations in the third persons sing. and plural. of the preterimperfect tense of the Indicative mood. the u. may be omitted, saying, Godea, for Godéva. Perdea, for Perdeva, Sentia, for Sentiva, Godeano, for Godevano, Perdeano, for Perdevano, Sentiano, for Sentivano. And in all the Conjugations this tense is used when one would express the continuing of any action, not the compleatness of the same, as the very word Imperfect intimateth ; as, Io Cantava, I was singing, Godeva, I was enjoying, Perdeva, I was losing, Sentiva, I was hearing ; most Strangers mistake this Tense for the Single Preterperfect Tense.

2 The single preterperfect tense of the same mood is used when we mean to express a certain time past, but never the same day the action is done ; and besides generally there is an adverb of time prefixt, as Hieri scrissi lettere per Livorno, Yesterday I wrote letters for Legorn ; not hieri hò scritto lettere l' anno santo egli fù in Roma, the holy year he was at Rome, not egli è stato in Roma.

3 The compound preterperfect tense, is made of the present tense of one of the two auxiliar verbs, hò I have, sono, I am, and the participle of some other verb ; as, Io hò portato. I have carried, son rimasto, I have staid : we use this tense when we intend to use any time past, but ever within the compass of the same day, or else without setting any time, meaning it to have been done a long time ago ; as, Hoggi hò scritto a Napoli, To day I have written to Naples , not Hoggi scrissi a Napoli. Il mio parente è morto in Italia, My kinsman died in Italy, not morì in Italia.

The preterpluperfect tenses we use when we mean to express a time past long ago, and most commonly the second confin'd with poiche, after that, Quando, when, guari, long, alhora, then, as poiche hebbe havuto Adamo il precetto da Dio, After that Adam had had the command from God, &c.

4 The future tense is the easyest of any ; for that the termination of all verbs runs alike without exception, as thus : ro, rai, rà, remo, rete, ranno, implying shall or will, let the verb signifie what it will.

5 The present tense of the subjunctive or optative moods is all one, saving as far as the signs make a difference, ô che o that, che that, &c. o che Io canti, o that I may sing, è tempo che Io canti, Its time that I sing, or were a singing, the first being the optative, the other the subjunctive, &c.

6 To the first preterimperfect tense of the subjunctive mood we generally affix some sign, or conditional mark, as se egli havesse il modo si farebbe valere, If he had means he would set himself forth ; the sign is also tacitly understood in the same tense, Saying havesse egli il modo, &c. had he means.

7 The second preterimperfect tense hath never any conditional sign preposed unto it, but usually followeth the first preterimperfect tense of the same mood as appeareth in the forealledged example, se egli havesse il modo si farebbe valere, not se egli havesse il modo si facesse valere. The placing of the same is not material, for we may as well say, si farebbe valere se egli havesse il modo, again parlerei spesso se havessi ben la pronontia I, would or should spake often if I had the pronuntiation right, not parlassi spesso se havrei la pronontia, &c. And note that the termination of this tense is irregular in all verbs whatsoever, and implys would, should or could, let the verb signifie what it will, as rei, resti, rebbe, or raia, remmo, or ressimo, reste, rebbero, rebbono or riano.

8 Note that the preterpluperfect tenses of the subjunctive mood have a particular affinity one with another and seem to play and gingle ; as, se, non fosse venuto, il medico, il poveraccio sarebbe morto. If the Physician had not come the poor wretch had died. The same may be exprest elegantly by a shorter cut ; namely putting both the tenses into the preterimperfect tense of the Indicative mood and the conditional participle (se) to it, se non veniva il medico, il poveraccio moriva, being the same in signification with the former , se non fosse venuto, &c.

9. The future tense of the subjunctive or optative moods is usual with Quando, but at pleasure. Quando is elegantly suplied with che, after the participle, as quando Io havrò sentito, when I shall have heard, sentito che havro quando. Io havrò pranzato, when I shall have din'd, pranzato che havrò.

10 The infinitive mood present tense elegantly expresseth the present of the Indicative, Ecco venire il Sgr : Cavaglier Paolo, Behold, or see, Sir Paul commeth ; and narratively as Historians do, the infinitive signifies the present tense, sometimes the preterimperfect tense and preterperfect tense of the Indicative mood, especially upon the heads or contents of Chapters. i Signori Cardinali vestirsi ô di Rosso ô di Pavonazzo secondo che porta la giornata. The Cardinals cloath either in Red or Purple as the day beareth.

11 The future of the infinitive confines much with the future in (rus) in latin. Haver ad amare amatu- Dover } rus) about esser per } to love.

12 The gerund is not frequent, but is circumscribed with a preposition, and the infinitive, nel morire, dying, or morendo.

13 The participle in the first and fourth conjugations is regular, ending the first in (ato) the fourth in (ito) (some onely excepted) the other of the second and third are so ambiguous, that set rules cannot be gathered, as may compleatly satisfie without implication or confusion, as from rimanere, to remain, rimasto , remained , from scrivere, to writ, scritto, written.

I mean ordinarily, but by strict grammarians rules may be had that may in some sort satisfie one , such I refer to grammars that interpret by the latin.

14 The preterperfect tense of the infinitive mood is often us'd elegantly by putting the article il or lo, to it, and reduc'd into a substantive, so as that the whole phrase is substantively l' haver imparato le scienze rende men rozzi li costumi, to have learned, or the learning of Arts sweetens behaviour, alluding the Latin, Didicisse fideliter artes, Emmollit mores, nec sinit esse feros.

THE MANNER OF FORMING OF VERBS.

Uſeful for GRAMMARIANS.

1. THE preſent tenſe of the indicative mood, is form-ed of the infinitive, by changing the three laſt letters into (o) as, cantare, to ſing; canto, I ſing.

2. The preterimperfect tenſe is formed from the infinitive alſo, by changing the two laſt letters in-to va; as, cantare, to ſing, cantava, I did ſing, or was ſinging.

3. The ſingle preterperfect tenſe is formed alſo of the infini-tive, by changing in the firſt conjugation are into ai: in the ſecond ere into ei: in the third, the two laſt ſyllables, into ſi or ſſi: in the fourth, ire into ii, as, cantare, to ſing; cantai, I ſang; godere, to enjoy; godei, I enjoyed; perdere, to loſe; perſi, I loſt; ſcrivere, to write; ſcriſſi, I wrote; ſentire, to hear, ſentii, I heard, &c.

4. The future is alſo formed of the infinitive, by changing, re into rò; as cantare, to ſing; cantarò, I ſhall or will ſing; go-dere, to enjoy; goderò, I ſhall or will enjoy; perdere, to loſe; perderò, I ſhall or will loſe; ſentire, to hear; ſentirò, I ſhall or will hear. Obſerve by the way, that in the firſt conjugation in the future of the indicative and ſecond preterimperfect tenſe of the ſubjunctive mood (a) is elegantly turned into (e) ſaying canterò, I ſhall ſing; rather than cantarò; canterei, I ſhould ſing; rather than, cantarei.

5. The imperative is form'd of the firſt perſon of the pre-ſent tenſe of the indicative, by changing (o) into (a) in the firſt conjugation; as, canto, I ſing; canta, ſing thou; but in the other three, the imperative is the ſame with the ſecond per-ſon of the preſent tenſe; as, godi, enjoy thou; ſcrivi, write thou; ſenti, hear thou. The third perſon of the imperative in the firſt conjugation, is the ſame with the ſecond perſon of the pre-ſent tenſe of the indicative mood of the ſame conjugation; as, canti, thou ſingeſt, canti, ſing he: in the other three conjugati-ons, the third perſon it formed from the firſt perſon of the pre-ſent tenſe of the indicative mood, by changing (o) into (a) as godo, I enjoy, goda, enjoy he; perdo, I loſe, perda, loſe he, ſento, I hear, ſenta, hear he: And in the third perſon plural of the firſt conjugation, ano is turned into ino, as, cantano, they ſing, cantino, ſing they: in the other three conjugations, ono is turned into ano, godono, they enjoy, godano, enjoy they, per-dono, they loſe, perdano loſe they, ſentono, they hear, ſenta-no, hear they.

6. The preſent tenſe of the ſubjunctive or optative mood, is the ſame with the third perſon ſingular of the imperative, in the ſeveral conjugations, only the ſigns being added, as ò che Io canti, O that I ſing, or God grant I ſing, ò che Io goda, O that I enjoy, or God grant I enjoy, ò che Io ſcriva, God grant I write, ò che Io ſenta, God grant I hear: and ſo throughout the tenſe to the laſt perſon.

7. The firſt preterimperfect tenſe of the ſubjunctive mood is formed of the ſecond perſon ſingular of the ſingle or uncom-pounded preterperfect tenſe of the indicative mood, changing ſt into ſſi, as, cantaſti, thou ſangſt, cantaſſi, ſhould I ſing, or if I ſang, godeſti, thou enjoy'dſt, godeſſi, ſhould I enjoy, or if I enjoy-ed, perdeſti, thou loſed'ſt, perdeſſi, ſhould I loſe, or if I did loſe, ſentiſti, thou heardſt, ſentiſſi, ſhould I hear, or if I ſhould hear.

8. The ſecond preterimperfect tenſe of the ſubjunctive mood is formed of the future of the indicative, by changing rò into rei, or ria, in all the four conjugations, canterò, I ſhall ſing, canterei, or canteria, I ſhould ſing, goderò, I ſhall enjoy, goderei, or goderia, I ſhould enjoy, perderò, I ſhall loſe, perderei, or per-deria, I ſhould loſe, ſentirò, I ſhall hear, ſentirei, or ſentiria, I ſhould hear.

9. The gerund, or alſo the active participle, as one may call it, is formed of the infinitive preſent, by changing in the firſt three conjugations, re into ndo, or nte, as, cantare, to ſing, can-tando, cantante, ſinging, godere, to enjoy, godendo, godente; enjoy-ing, perdere, to loſe, perdendo, perdente, loſing; but in the fourth conjugation, by changing re into endo or ente, and caſting away the (i) as, ſentire, to hear, ſentendo not ſentiendo hearing; though in the participle the (i) may be kept, ſaying, ſentiente, not ſentente.

10. The paſſive participle is alſo formed of the preſent of the infinitive, by changing re into to, cantare to ſing, cantato, ſung, ſentire, to hear, ſentito, heard. The rule is not general, only in the firſt and fourth Conjugation, in the ſecond and third the participle varies very much, therefore look in the irre-gulars of thoſe conjugations, ſome being to form the verbs from the preſent of the indicative, as being more after the Latines: But this way by practice ſeems to be the eaſier, for as much as the infinitives, in dictionaries, are more obvious to a ſtrangers eye, than the firſt perſon of the indicative: but all is one up-on the matter.

A Series of ſuch verbs as uſually trouble thoſe moſt who underſtand the Latin Tongue beſt, in regard the ſignification being one and the ſame, they are notwithſtanding of different conjugations; as,

Observe, that where the numbers do not follow, but skip, there they are regular, and follow the infinitive mood.

The Irregulars of the third Conjugation, chiefly vary in the Infinitive mood, in the present of the Indicative, in the second preterimperfect tenses of the Optative and Subjunctive moods, being syncopated and cut short in many of them; they vary also in the single preterperfect tense of the Indicative, and in the Participle.

The other tenses may be framed by the examples of the second Conjugation, as having coherency one with another in their terminations; for between the second and third Conjugations there is little or no difference, but in the accenting of the infinitive mood.

This following Table is necessary to be perused, containing the Infinitive mood in the first place; in the second place, the first person of the present tense of the Indicative mood; in the third place, the first person of the single preterperfect tense of the Indicative mood; in the fourth place, the Participle: the present of the subjunctive mood may easily be fram'd of the present of the Indicative, changing (o) into (a) as, ardo, arda, &c.

Vorrei for volerei, I should or would be willing.
Verrei for venirei, I should or would come.

Observe that the contracts are generally more in use than when written at length.

Of the Verb Passive.

In all Verbs it is made by putting the Verb sono to any passive participle: as for example.

Sing. { Io sono amato, I am loved. Tu sei amato, thou art loved. Egli è amato, he is loved.

Plur. { Noi siamo amati, we are loved. Voi sete amati, ye are loved. Essi sono amati, they are loved.

And so of all the rest of the tenses: and if feminine, amata, or amate.

Only in the third person singular and plural by putting si before or after, the passivation is exprest, as si ama, amasi, he, or it is loved; si amano, amansi, they, or those things are loved, and so quite through the Verb, si being ever written a part if coming before, if after, incorporated, and the vowel lost, as appears by amansi and amanosi.

Note, that si never comes before Infinitives, Gerunds or Participles, as appears in this example, unless non or nè come immediately before si, as non or nè si potendo far di meno, it not being possible to do otherwise.

Verbs Neuters conjugated by the auxiliar Verb Havere to have.

Io ho caminato, I have walkt.
Io ho devuto, I have owed.
Io ho dormito, I have slept.
Io ho nocciuto, I have hurt.
Io ho seduto, I have sate.
Io ho potuto, I have been able.
Io ho voluto, I have been willing, not son caminato, son dovuto.

Verbs Neuters conjugated by the Verb Essere to be.

Io sono entrato, I have come in, or am come in.
Io son' uscito, I am gone out, or have gone out.
Io son nato, I am born.
Io son restato, I have forborn.
Io son rimasto, idem:
Io son ritornato, I am returned.
Io son volato, I have flown, not ho entrato, &c.

These Verbs are very frequent in discourse, and therefore good heed ought to be taken that they be not misapplied.

The Verb reciprocal how conjugated.

Io mi dico, I say my self.
Tu ti dici, thou sayest thy self.
Egli si dice, he sayeth himself.
Noi ci diciamo, we say our selves.
Voi vi dite, ye say your selves,
Essi si dicono, they say themselves.

And so throughout all along, Io mi dicevo I said my self, tu ti dicevi thou sayedst thy self, &c.

Others are reciprocal with particles, relating to persons or things, or both.

Io mi fido di, I trust in—
Tu ti fidi di, thou trusteth in—
Egli si fida di, he trusteth in—
Noi ci fidiamo di, we trust in—
Voi vi fidate di, ye trust in—
Essi si fidano di, they trust in—

Io me ne rido, I laught at it.
Tu te ne ridi, thou laughest at it.
Egli se ne ridi, he laughs at it.
Noi ce ne ridiamo, we laugh at it.
Voi ve ne ridete, ye laugh at it.
Essi se ne ridono, they laugh at it.

Verbs impersonals absolutely without any Particles.

Piove, it raineth.
Tuona, it thunders.
Nevica, it snoweth.
Diluvia, it pours down amain.
Tempesta, it storms or hails.
Balena, it lightens.

The following verbs are used impersonally, viz.

Tocca, it concerns.
Cale, it's ones care.
Duole, it grieves.
Rincresce, its irksome.
Conviene, its fitting.
Lice, its lawful.
Deve, one ought.
Può, it is possible.
Puole it may be.
Dice, it becomes.
Disdice, it misbecomes.
Confà, it suits.
Appartiene, it belongs.
Ricerca, it requires.

But especially with some of these Particles, mi, si li, vi, ci, ti, as for example,

Mi tocca, it concerns me, or comes to my share.
Mi toccava, it did concern me.
Mi è toccato, it hath concerned me.
Mi toccò, it concerned me.
Mi era toccato, it had concerned me.
Mi fu toccato, idem.
Mi toccherà, it will concern me,
Mi tocchi, let it concern me.
Che mi tocchi, may it concern me.
Che mi toccasse, would it concern'd me.
Mi toccasse, should it concern me.
Mi toccherebbe, it would concern me.
O che mi sia toccato, pray God it hath concern'd me.
O che mi fosse toccato, would God it had concern'd me.

Mi sarebbe toccato, it would have concern'd me.
Quando mi sarà toccato, when it shall have concern'd me.
Toccarmi, to concern me.
Haver mi a toccare, to be about to concern me.
Toccandomi, it concerning me.
Toccatomi, it having concern'd me.
Essermi toccato, to have concern'd me.
Essendomi toccato, it having concern'd me.
Essendo per toccarmi, it being about to concern me:
And so of the rest.

The Verb essere is oft put impersonally with the Particles ci or vi, signifying as much as there in English.

I.

Ciè, ecci, there is, is there? or it is there.
Ci sono, sonci, there are, are there? or they are there.

2.

Ci era, there was, was there?
Ci erano, or eranci, there were, or were there.

And so putting (vi) in the like manner, vi è, evvi, vi era, eravi, &c. and in the infinitive, essere or esservi, there to be, essendoci, or essendovi, there being, or being there.

Note, that in the Conjugations I have used the pronouns Io, Tu, Egli, quite thorow, on purpose to use the Learner to know the Persons, not that they are always necessary in discourse, or writing. Practice will make this clear.

And so much for the Verbs.

The Contract Participles of the first Conjugation, which are most frequent both in writing and discourse.

Di che sorte, to some tune, to some purpose.
Viva, let him live, live he.
Via, away.
Ben bè, well, go to.
Zitto, husht, not a word.
Putting the fore-finger a cross ones mouth.

By these Interjections is exprest sorrow or joy, admiration or disdain, provocation or intreaty, as occasion serves.

AN APPENDIX TO THE INTRODUCTION: OR, A Summary of Miscellany OBSERVATIONS:

The Right and ready underſtanding of which, preſuppoſes ſome inſight of the Latin Tongue, or at leaſt of terms of Grammar: All which, after a diligent peruſal of the former part of this Introduction, may competently be underſtood, even by weak capacities, I mean ſuch as had rather learn by rote than by rule.

I.

GEnerally, the finite Articles, il, lo, la, le, ſignifie as much as (the) in Engliſh, eſpecially in the oblique caſes, as dello of the, allo to the, dallo from the; delle, alle, dalli, alli, or dagli, &c. it is put after the nature of the Greeks, at the beginning of words, rather for ornament than neceſſity, in relation to ſenſe, though neceſſary in relation to cuſtom, and ſo it may ſignifie as much as (a) in Engliſh; as, l' amico compatiſcei diffetti dell' amico, a friend bears with the defects of a friend: It were abſurd to ſay, Amico compatiſce, &c. alſo, La virtù è da deſiderare, virtue is to be deſired, not virtù è da deſiderare.

II.

Homogeneal things, that is, things of the ſame matter, or ſubſtance, alſo the elements, things of nature, that grow, as fruits of the earth, uſually have the finite, Iddio creò il cielo e la terra, God created heaven and earth: it were not proper to ſay, creò cielo e terra. And the genitive caſe of the finite article is uſed, if any uncertain quantity thereof be implied, Un tal contadino m' hà portato delli ſonghi, a certain Country fellow hath brought me ſome Muſhromes, dimani m' apporterà delle mele, to morrow he will bring me ſome Apples, &c. and in this caſe it ſeems to loſe the ſenſe of (the,) and ſo alſo where there is an indefiniteneſs of numbers, egli hà de' bei figli, he hath handſom children; as alſo the ſame finite article ſerves when we expreſs a ſlight of any thing; as, le parole non ſono che del vento, words are but ſome wind, ſignifying ſomething more than le parole non ſono che vento; and alſo being put before any appellative noun, it ſignifieth quantity, part or ſome of the ſame, volete del pane? will you have ſome bread? ô del vino, or ſome wine? but if poco be uſed, then uſe the indefinite article di; as, volete un poco di pane? will you have a little bread? or, un poco di vino, a little wine? unleſs ſome wine be ſpecified after poco; as, dammi un poco del roſcio, & un poco del bianco, give me a little of the red, and a little of the white, relating to wine, if adverbs of quantity follow the ſubſtantive, then the finite article is uſed, not the indefinite, egli hà d' quattrini aſſai, he hath moneys enough, not, egli hà di quattrini aſſai.

III.

À, All', Al, Allo, Alla, Ai, A', Agli, Alli, Alle: as, gli, li, le, mi, ti ſi, ci, vi, me, te, ſe, ce, ve, ne, coming with verbs of privation, ſignifie as much as (from,) contrary to their natural ſignification, which is (to,) egli hà levata la ſpada al nimico, he hath taken away the ſword from the enemy; gli aſſaſſini gli hanno rubbati i ſuoi quattrini, the thieves have ſtoln away his moneys.

IV.

Da, dal, da', dalli, dagli, dalla, dalle, following any verb implying motion, ſo that the perſon or perſons to whom the motion is made or intended, be named, ſignifies not (from) but (to) or (at) as, andate dal medico, go to the Phyſician; venite da me, come to me, E ito a ſtar dalla Signora Vittoria, he is gone to dwell at Mrs. Victoria's.

V.

The finite articles, dal, dalle, &c. ſerve for adverbs of exception, but then the perſon or thing excepted muſt immediately follow the article, with in fuori, or elſe, in poi, as tutti gl' ufficiali furono ſcaſſati dal Alfiere in poi, all the officers were caſhiered, but the Enſign: Tutte le donne ci ponno entrare dalle Corteggiane in fuori, all the women may come in but the Courtezans.

VI.

Da coming before words of number, ſerves for the prepoſition intorno, or incirca; that is, about, or a matter of, as nella battaglia vi furono da mille feriti, e dà cento morti, in the battel there were about a thouſand wounded, and a matter of a hundred kill'd out-right.

VII.

If the pronoun poſſeſſive preceed the ſubſtantive, the article finite preceeds the pronoun, if the pronoun come after, then there is no article prefixt to the pronoun, queſta è caſa mia, this is my houſe, queſta è la mia caſa, &c.

VIII.

Da, frà, per, in, a, tacitely imply the finite article, Io dicevo frà mio cuore, I said in my heart: dà necessità costretto, constrained by necessity, per mio diporto, for my pleasure; si e messo in braccia alla fortuna, he hath put himself into the arms of fortune; a suo modo, after his own way; that is, frà il mio cuore, dalla necessità costretto, per il mio diporto, nelle braccia alla fortuna, al suo modo.

IX.

Articles, Nouns, Pronouns and Participles agree with their Substantives, in gender, number and case, i frutti acerbi sono stimati malsani, green fruits are esteemed unwholesom, le sue belle opere sono quelle che l' hanno immortalato, his fine works are those which have immortalized him: and if there be two substantives of several genders, the adjective plural agrees with the worthiest, il padre e la madre son morti, the father and the mother are dead: also two singulars require a verb plural, as in the example aforesaid, but plainer in this, Io & il mio compagno saremo dimani in Borgo, my partner and I to morrow will be in the Borough: Giovanni, Antonio & Io andassimo a spasso, John, Anthony and I went abroad.

X.

Di is used in an ablative sense: as, levatosi il capello di capo, having pulled off his hat; viene di Napoli, he comes from Naples; also with Pronouns demonstratives, it implies similitude or likeness, fate di questo, do thus.

XI.

The finite article del, dello, delli, degli, dalla, delle, is used in the sense of (for) ringratio V. S. del favore, I thank you for the favour; not per il favore, as English men are apt to say, la ringratio delle sua amorevolezza, I thank you for your kindness; not per la sua amorevolezza.

XII.

The indefinite article da, before infinitives, makes the same to be of a passive signification: as, carta da scrivere, writing paper, or paper to be written on: carne da magnare, meat fit to be eaten: vino da bere, wine fit to be drunk: and with Substantives, it signifies fitness, or propriety, guanti da huomo e da donna, gloves fit or proper for men and women, as much as abile able, atto fit, degno worthy.

XIII.

The finite article never comes before proper names, unless expressing the works of such a person, il Cicerone, Tullies works, il Tasso, the Poet Tassus his Poems or works.

XIV.

The finite article cometh elegantly before an appellative or adjective, with a proper name after it, for comparison or distinction sake, il magno Alessandro, Alexander the great; but if the proper name precede, then the appellative shall have no article; as, Alessandro magno: observe withal, that before names of months, as at the dating of a letter, the article is elegantly omitted; as a di 20 Decembre, 1658. the 20 of December, for alli vinti di Decembre.

XV.

Generally the substantive precedes the adjective; as, pan bianco white-bread, vin puro pure wine: here custom must be attended where it deviates, for many adjectives that imply quality, good or bad, or number, go before their substantives; as, mille scudi, a thousand crowns, brutto negotio, a scurvy business, buon compagno, a good fellow, bella giornata, a fair day, cativa gente, ill people, infelici incontri, unhappy incounters. the placing alters the sense in many, that the meaning is meerly different; as huomo gallante, a brave fellow, gallant' huomo, a well dealing man; huomo valente, a valiant fellow; valent' huomo, an able fellow in his calling; robba buona, good ware; buona robba, a Courtezan or Whore.

XVI.

The finite articles, il, lo, preceding an adjective, make the same to be a substantive, il timido l' ammonitione di Brescia nol armerebbe, a fearful body, all the arms of Brescia would not suffice to arm, relating to persons: if relating to things or qualities, the abstract or substantive is meant thereby; dicessi mai il vero, would thou wouldst once speak truth, rather than la verita; col vivo del cuore, with a zealous heart, rather than vivezza del cuore, the liveliness of the heart.

XVII.

Of noun adjectives ending in le, ro, re, you make adverbs of quality, namely by taking away (e) adding mente to them; as, facilmente, easily; not facilemente: leggiermente, lightly, not leggieromente: particolarmente, particularly, not particolaremente: but feminine adjectives ending in (a) make adverbs only by adding mente to them; as, savia, wise, saviamente wisely; santa, holy, santamente holily.

XVIII.

Generally names of trees are of the masculine gender, and the fruits of the feminine; as, pero, a Pear-tree, pera a Pear.

XIX.

Substantives may be adjectives, implying action or passion, by taking away the last vowel, providing it be not an (o) and putting oso to it; as, paura, fear; pauroso, fearful; amore, love; amoroso, loving, or amorous: but when they end in (o) put only (so) to it, as, bisogno, need; bisognoso, needful, or needy: and if you would have the adjective to express chiefly passion, turn the last vowel into (e) in case it should not end so, and put vole to it; as, bisogno, need; bisognevole, full of need, or that may be needful; gusto, taste; gustevole, well tasted; burla, a jest; burlevole, that may be jested with. To the same purpose, if you will have the adjective to end in (bile) if the substantive end in (a) put bile to it; as, scusa, an excuse, scusabile, excusable: if in any other vowel, then take away that vowel, and put abile to it; as, lode, praise; lodabile, praisable: otherwise this adjective (abile) may be framed of the third person, present tense, indicative mood of verbs of the first conjugation; as, ama, he loveth; amabile, that may be loved.

XX.

Taking the participle of the preterperfect tense of any verb active, and putting (re) unto the same, you frame a substantive that expresseth action; as, amato, loved; amatore, a lover: which may also be made of the feminine gender, by changing tore into trice; amatore, a lover; amatrice, a she-lover, or loveress; retto, governed; rettore, a governor; rettrice, a governess. Also by taking the third person of the present tense indicative mood of the first conjugation, and the second person singular of the same tense of any verb of the other three conjugations, and putting any noun substantive to the same, you express the instrument, and also the artificer of the same, Scalda-vivande, a chafing-dish; porta-lettere, a letter-carrier; capi-fuochi, hand-irons: and also the substantive may be of the plural number, though not often; as, scopri-secreti, a blab or tell-tale; scalda-letti, a warming-pan, for scopri-secreto, scalda-letto.

XXI.

Taking away from masculine words belonging to any Art or Trade the last vowel, and adding aro, or aio to it, you express the Professor, or the Artificer of the same; as, libro, a book; libraro, a bookseller, or libraio; capello, a hat; capellaro, or capellaio, a hat-maker or seller. And to express the feminine turn aro or aio into ara or aia, saying capellara, or capellaia, a woman that makes or sells hats. Also any substantive, or adjective, or verb ending in (a) put ruolo to it, and you express the artificer; frutta, fruit; fruttaruolo, a fruit-seller; barca, a boat; barcaruolo, a boat-man; pizzica, he taketh up; pizzicaruolo, one that retaileth as a Chandler: and also in many, aruolo may be turned into aiuolo; as legnaruolo, a woodmonger, legnaiuolo, idem.

XXII.

From feminine nouns ending in (a) by adding (ro) or (io) thereto, you likewise express the Artificer; as, spada, a sword; spadaro or spadaio a cutler; bottega, a shop; bottegaro, or bottegaio, a shop-keeper: change (ro) or (io) into (ra) or (ia) and you make the feminines of the same; as, spadara or spadaia, a woman cutler; bottegara, bottegaia, a woman shop-keeper.

XXIII.

From all names of tools or instruments, by which it is possible to strike, or otherwise to express capacity and fulness of any thing or place, or the worth or value of any coin, if masculine, taking away the last vowel, and adding thereto ata, you express the power and effect, or blow, or worth of the same; as, arcobugio, a gun, arcobugiata, a gunshot; bastone, a cudgel; bastonata, a blow with a cudgel; sasso, a stone; sassata a stones cast, or a blow with a stone; capello, a hat; capellata, a hat-full; baiocco, a Roman penny; baioccata a pennyworth: but if feminine, the vowel vowel remains and only ta is added; as, lancia, a lance; lanciata, a thrust with a lance; carozza, a coach; carozzata, a choachfull.

XXIV.

Putting alla to an adjective of the feminine gender, you express the similitude or likeness of any thing, or the fashion or custom of any thing, person, or place; as, all' Italiana, after the Italian fashion, alla Tedesca, after the German fashion; alla Francese, after the French fashion; alla reale, royally, or really; all' amica, after the old fashion; alla Cardinale, Cardinal-like; where observe, that Cardinale, is an adjective.

XXV.

Putting da before any substantive, whether masculine or feminine, hath the same force as alla before an adjective; sfoggia da Principe, he lays it on like a Prince; stà da Principessa, she dwells Princess-like.

XXVI.

In certain expressions implying doubt, or condition, instead of Io, I; tù, thou; egli, he; ella, she; me, te, lui, and lei, are rather us'd; as, Tù l' hai riverito pensando che fussème, thou saluted'st him, thinking 'twas I, not Io: egli m' hà riverito pensando che fossi te, he saluted me, thinking 'twas thee; Se Io fossi lui farei altrimente, If I were he, I would do otherwise; not, Se fossi egli: Se stesse a lei di parlare, if it were for her to speak, not, se stesse a ella.

XXVII.

The conjunctive Pronouns, or pronoun particles, mi, ti, si, ci, vi, ne, if they follow verb, gerund, or participle, are incorporated with the same, if they precede the verb, they are written apart; as, mi scrive, he writes to me, scrivemi: but they cannot immediately precede a gerund or participle, positively speaking; as, mi dicendo, but dicendomi; mi pentito, but pentitomi: Note, that if ne, lo, la, li, gli, le, come between, then the (i) of the participle is turned into (e) me ne scrive, he writes me of it; scrivemene, not mi ne scrive, or scrivemine.

XXVIII.

The pronoun personal is generally understood in verbs after the manner of the Latines; scrivo a V. S. I write to you, parlo di poco, I speak of little: yet in verbs reciprocal, it seems more graceful to express the pronoun, Io non m' inganno, I do not mistake or deceive my self; egli s' affatica come un cane, he labours like a dog.

XXIX.

The finite articles, il, lo, i, li, gli, la, le, in the dative and accusative cases assume the nature of pronouns relatives, quando il viddi, when I saw him; quando gli parlasti, when thou spakest to him, &c. havete visto l' amico? have you seen our friend? Signor sì l' hò visto, yes Sir, I have seen him.

XXX.

Pronouns possessives in the singular number, exprest with a substantive, and with a finite article of the singular number imply goods or wealth, or the estate of the body; as, son patron del mio, I am master of my own; il tuo lo puoi dar a chi tù vuoi, thy estate thou mayest bestow on whom thou wilt: but if the pronouns possessives be exprest in the plural number, and the finite article likewise in the plural, then they signifie relations of kindred or friends, la più parte delli miei son ancor vivi per gratia di Dio, the greatest number of my relations are as yet alive, by the grace of God, I tuoi son morti, thy relations are dead.

XXXI.

The finite article, whether masculine or feminine singular or plural, is frequently put before possessive pronouns, which concord with their substantives that follow them, in case, gender and number, il mio cavallo, my horse; il tuo, il suo, il nostro, il vostro, il loro, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; i miei cavalli, my horses; i tuoi, i suoi, i nostri, i vostri, i loro, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; la mia carozza, my coach; la tua, la sua, la nostra, la vostra, la loro, thine, his, ours, yours, theirs; le mie corozze, my coaches; le tue, le sue, le nostre, le vostre, le loro, his, ours, yours, theirs: sometime the indefinite article is only used; as, di mia mano, of my hand, &c. a mio modo, after my own way; da mio fratello, from my brother, the like of tuo, suo, &c.

XXXII.

Two negatives deny most, whereas in latin they affirm, Havete visto niente in piazza? Saw you nothing in the street? Io non hò vista nulla, I saw nothing at all, or in the least.

XXXIII.

When ne serves for an adverb of distinction or denial, it is accented, and usually it is iterated; as, questa medicina nè mi giova, nè mi nuoce, this physick neither doth me good nor hurt: when it signifies an adverb of place, namely, coming before or after verbs of motion, implying as much as hence, or thence, or way, it is written without an accent, egli se ne viene alla volta nostra, he is coming thence towards us; vattene per i fatti tuoi, get thee hence about thy business, and coming before or after verbs that imply not motion, it signifies as much as (at it,) or (of it,) se ne ride, he laughs at it, se ne lamenta, he complains of it: also written without an accent, it signifies as much as (us) or, (for us); being become a pronoun of the dative and accusative cases plural; egli ne diede il buon dì e' l buon anno; he gave us the good day, and good year; havendone visti subito ne sfuggì, having seen us, presently he shun'd us: for matter of knowing when it relates to person or place, the sense must declare it. The same is also used as an adverb of quantity, for an abbreviation, and to avoid tautologies, signifying (some, part of the same, whereof, or of them) voi m' havete ricercato di certe cose che se Io ne havessi, voi ne saresti patrone, ma non havendone voi me ne haverete per iscusato, you have ask'd me about certain things, that if I had any, you should be master of them; but having not any of them, you will excuse me for the same, when it is apostrophed, as, ne', the masculine finite article (i) is understood, hora ne' prati non si truova un puoco d' herba per miraculo, now in the fields there's not to be seen a handful of grass, if one would give never so much; also it is apostrophed when it is put interrogatively, ò vero n'è? it is true, is't not?

XXXIV.

Si generally hath these three qualities, it makes verbs passives, si ama la virtù, virtue is beloved; or, amasi la virtù: or it makes verbs reciprocal, being affixed to verbs, gerunds or participles relating to persons; as, egli si raccorda, he remembers himself; raccordarsi, to remember ones self; raccordandosi, remembring ones self; raccordatosi, having remembred himself, and so of the rest: and it makes verbs to be imperfonal; as, si dice che sia seguita una gran bataglia, they say, or it is said, that there hath been a great battel: but it also hath some other significations; as usually it is an adverb of affirmation; as, sì Signor, or Signor sì, sì Signora, Signora sì, yes Sir, yes Madam; and then it is accented: also it is an adverb of comparison, or similitude, signifying so, or as well; as cavagliero si avventurato non fù mai, there was never such, or so fortunate a Gentleman: or sometimes an adverb of quantity, signifying as well, as much; ambo felici, sì la moglie come il marito, both happy, as well the wife as the husband; Io m' adopro sì per il vostro interesse quanto per il mio, I endeavour as well for your interest as my own; and then it is also accented: sometimes it signifies yet, or neverthelefs, se per altro non mi vuoi amare, sì amami perche ti son parente, if thou wilt love me for no end, yet love me because I am thy kinsman; also then it is accented. Lastly, observe, that it is more elegantly put before the auxiliar verb, than after the infinitive mood following; as it is more elegant and usual in discourse, to say, si può veramente lodar questa moda, this fashion may truly be commended; rather than, può veramente lodar si questa moda.

XXXV.

The particles di, e', egli, ei, ben, ne, già, pur, me, che, il, have very oft no signification, and are only put or inserted into a phrase, for ornament sake; as, vi sono di molti che nolla credono questa nova, there are many who believe not this news, &c.

XXXVI.

As gli accompanied with ne, la, lo, le, serves in the singular number both to masculines and feminines; glieni parlai, I spake to him or her of it; gliela diedi, I gave it him or her; glielo scrissi, I wrote it him or her: so it serves in the dative plural, both to masculines and feminines, signifying so much as loro to them, specially in the particle (se) that is, (si) the (i) turned in (e) preceding, which caused an imperfonality or passivation; non hanno vino, ma se gliene darà, they have no wine, but there shall be some given them: where them may relate to either gender, il presente è ammanito, però se glielo potrà mandare, the present is ready, and therefore it may be sent them.

XXXVII.

XXXVII.

To interrogations made of di dove? that is, whence are you? what Countreyman are you? if it be of a general place, as of a Kingdom or Commonwealth, answer is made by di; as, di dove sete? answer, di Italia, di Spagna, of Italy, of Spain, that is as much as Italiano an Italian, Spagnuolo a Spaniard: but if of a particular place, as of some Town or City, or so; then answer is best made by da; as, di dove sete? whence are you? answer, da Albano, da Tivoli, of Alban, or of Tivoli: some say, da dove sete?

XXXVIII.

Verbs that imply addition or application to any thing; as verbs of coming, feeling, going, exhorting, studying, learning, indenting, beginning, making, forcing, preparing, inviting, moving, perswading, inventing, require rather a or ad, after them than di (to) comminciò a capire, I begin to conceive or apprehend, not di capire: egli si prepara a combattere, he prepares himself to fight: ti affretti troppo ad arrichire, thou makest too much hast to be rich, not di combattere, di arrichire: mi pongo à sedere perche son stracco, I set me down, because I am weary; not, di sedere: mi avvezzo a parlare, I use my self to speak; not, di parlare: the like of mi sforzo, I force my self; mi trattengo, I stay; mi ritardo, I linger; sto, I stand, or am; consiglio, I counsel; supplico, I intreat; arrivo, I arrive; persuado, I perswade; essorto, I exhort; stimolo, I provoke; vengo, I come; seguo, I follow: all better with a or ad than di.

XXXIX.

The masculine finite article put before an infinitive, makes the same to assume the nature of a substantive, or gerund in English; as, il parlare di sovverchio è segnale di pazzia excessive speech, or over much speaking, is a sign of folly or madness: the like if it be joyned with any preposition or pronoun demonstrative; as, col studiare s' impara; that is, con lo studiare, &c. by studying one learns: quel parlar tanto al ultimo stracca, that speaking so much, at last wearieth.

XL.

All phrases or expressions which suppose a thing to be certain, the conjunction (che) following the same, require the indicative mood, not the subjunctive mood; as, sò or conosco I know, vedo I see, affirmo I affirm, accorgo I perceive, osservo I observe, odo I hear, sento I feel, tocco I touch, gusto I taste, tasto I feel, truovo I find, giudico I judge, raccanto I relate, mantengo I maintain; as, sò che dici la verità, or il vero, I know thou sayest true, &c. but these following, penso I think, credo I believe, stimo I suppose, dubito I doubt, mi rallegro I am glad, mi doglio I am sorry, mi maraviglio I wonder: after the conjunction (che) either the indicative or subjunctive may indifferently follow, Io penso che è donna honorata, I think she is an honest woman, or, che sia donna honorata: but if a negative particle come before these, then it is best the subjunctive follow (che); as, non pensate che Io sia così trascurato, che non sappia il fatto mio, do not think that I am so overseen, as that I know not my interest, or what is best for me; though some verbs are indifferent to a, ad, di, or che.

XLI.

Verbs generally have after them a, ad, or di, with an infinitive, or else (che) with a subjunctive, Prego V. S. a farmi questa gratia, I pray your Lordship to do me this favour. La prego di farma questa gratia, I pray you to do me the favour; or la prego che mi faccia questa gratia, I pray you that you would be pleased to do me the favour; or, la prego che mi voglia far la gratia: Use must make perfectness in these occasions.

XLII.

Per, with an infinitive, or any perfect tense of the same, implies causality or reason, wherefore any thing is done, or hath been done, fù liberato per esser forestiere, he was freed, because he was a stranger: fù giustitiato per haver assassinato, he was executed for having robb'd and murther'd, or because he robb'd and murther'd: mi son messo a tavola per esser che non sete venuto all' hora determinata, I sate me down to meat, forasmuch as you came not at the appointed hour.

XLIII.

When the present tense of the indicative mood is used, then the present tense of the subjunctive mood answers to it; egli mi prega che Io li faccia quel servitio, he intreats me to do him that civility; not, che li facessi: but if the preterimperfect tense, or preterperfect tenses of the indicative mood be used, then the preterimperfect tense of the subjunctive mood answers to it; as, egli mi pregava con istanza che Io li facessi quel servitio, he prayed me, or was at me earnestly, that I would do him that civility; not, li faccia. Also, mi prego, or m' havea pregato che li facessi, &c. he prayed me, or had prayed me, that I would, &c.

XLIV.

The infinitives of verbs may lose their last vowel, amar, goder, legger, sentir, unless they end a period; then, amare, godere, leggere, sentire: the like of nouns substantives or adjectives ending in are or ore, mi fà favor particolare, mi fa particolar favore, writing the word at length still, if it end the period; il bel morir tutta la vita honora, a noble death crowns a mans whole life; amor fa'l bel servire, love makes service pleasant.

XLV.

The verbs, sapere, to know or be able, fare, to do; dovere, to owe; accadere, to happen; solere, to be wont, are seldom or never exprest with (di); as, egli sà parlar latino, he can speak latin; not, sa di parlar latino; sà scrivere una mano corsiva, he can write a running hand, not, sa di scrivere: though it is proper to say, sa di latino, he hath skill in the latin; or, sa di scrittura, he understands writing, &c. di is generally used after a substantive; as, hà voglia di magnare, he hath a mind to eat; hà l' animo di mortificarmi, his mind is to punish me, not, hà voglia a magnare; or, hà animo a mortificarmi.

XLVI.

The particle si is elegantly put before the auxiliar, which is due to the infinitive; as, queste cose non si hanno da dire, these things ought not to be said, instead of non hanno da dirsi: queste cose non si possono dire, these things cannot be said, instead of non possono dirsi: la lettione si ha da imparar a mente, the lesson is to be learned by heart, instead of hà da impararsi a mente.

XLVII.

The verbs, posso, I can; voglio, I will; being accompanied with reciprocals, admit either of the auxiliar verbs, havere, to have; or essere, to be; if they have the pronoun particles after them, then they take the verb havere; as, Io non hò potuto attribuirmi tal lode, I have not been able to attribute to my self such praise: but if the pronoun particle proceed, then the verb essere is used, as non mi son voluto attribuir tal lode.

XLVIII.

There being neuters actives and neuters passives, heed is to be taken in the right use of them, for the active neuters in their compound preterpefect tenses are joyned with the verb havere to have; as hò caminato, I have gone, walk'd, or march'd; not, son caminato: hò dormito, I have slept, not, son dormito: hò potuto, I have been able, not, son potuto: hò dovuto, I have owed, not, son dovuto: hò nocciuto, I have offended, or done hurt unto; not, son nocciuto: hò voluto, I have been willing, not son voluto: whereas passive neuters in their compound preterperfect tenses are joyned with the verb essere; as, Io sono stato, I have been; not, Io hò stato: Io sono andato, I have gone; not, Io hò andato: Io sono entrato, I have entred; not, hò entrato: sono uscito, I am gone out, or I went out; not, hò uscito: son nato, I was born; not hò nato: son restato, or rimasto, I tarried, or remained; not, hò restato or rimasto: son ritornato, I returned not; hò ritornato: son volato, I have flown; not hò volato: And these are only passive by name, in as much as they assume to them the verb essere, but in effect they are actives: and to this purpose observe, that neuter passives so called in their compound preterperfect tenses, have, or ought to have their passive participle agreeing in gender and number with their agent, due fanciulli son nati ad un parto, two children born at a birth; la Signora se n' e uscita in carozza, my Lady is gone out in a coach: whereas in the neuters active it is not necessary so to be: as, i patroni hanno havuto bel tempo, our masters have had fair weather; not, havuti bel tempo: la Signora he partorito due figli ad un parto, my Lady hath brought forth two children at a birth; not, partorita, or partoriti, hà penato a partorire, she hath had pains in her delivery; not, penata. Observe also that some neuters may assume either of the auxiliars, essere, or havere, Io mi son fatto male, I have done my self hurt; or, mi hò fatto male.

XLIX.

The Verb fare, when it signifies to play, act, or represent any person or thing, sometimes requires an accusative case; as costui fà il pedante, this fellow plays or acts the pedant: sometimes the genitive; as, costui fà del pedante.

L.

Verbs of giving or privation, recommending, promiſing, or interceding, beſides an accuſative caſe of the thing require a dative caſe of the perſon: as, Io gli hò imparato la retorica, I have taught him Rhetorick: egli mi ha levato il pane, he hath taken away my bread or livelihood, &c.

L I.

Theſe verbs, havere, toccare, pizzicare, ſapere, are put with a genitive caſe, and the finite article, when they are meant to expreſs either ſimplicity or confidence; as, hà del ignorante, he hath ſomething of a dull man in him: tocca del Franceſe, he hath a touch of the French humour: pizzica del villano, he hath ſomewhat of a Clown in him: ſà del pedante, it's pedantical.

L I I.

Whatever tenſe the queſtion is of, the anſwer ought to be in the ſame, dove andaſti hieri? where went'ſt thou yeſterday? anſwer, andai fuor di Roma, I went out of Rome.

L I I I.

One may command or intreat in the following ways: ſpeaking to an equal, uſe the ſecond perſon plural of the preſent tenſe of the indicative mood, parlate forte acciò che vi ſenta, ſpeak loud, that I may hear you: alſo by the ſecond perſon plural of the preſent tenſe of the ſubjunctive mood of any Verb, ſappiate melo dire a tempo ſe volete venire, tell it me in time, or give me notice in time whether you'll come, or if you come: ſpeaking to a ſuperiour, or much honoured friend, uſe the third perſon of the ſubjunctive mood preſent tenſe, V. S. mi dica il ſuo parere, be pleas'd to tell me your opinion: if ſpeaking to more than one, dicano le Signorie loro i loro pareri, be pleas'd my maſters to ſpeak your opinions: ſpeaking to an inferior, or elſe a boſom friend, uſe the imperative, và preſto, camina, go quickly, march away; parla piano, ſpeak ſoftly.

L I V.

The ways of forbidding or diſſwading are as follow: ſpeaking to an equal uſe the ſecond perſon plural of the preſent tenſe of the indicative mood, and prepoſe thereto the negative particle (non); non andate che ve ne pentirete, do not go, for you'll repent you of it; alſo you may uſe the auxiliar verb volere, in the ſecond perſon plural of the ſubjunctive mood, preſent tenſe, putting thereto the negative (non): non vogliate dire queſte coſe ad un par mio, I pray do not offer to tell theſe things to ſuch a one as I: ſpeaking to a ſuperior or much honoured friend, uſe the third perſon ſingular of the ſubjunctive mood, preſent tenſe, with the negative particle; as, non dica queſto per gratia, ſay not ſo, I beſeech you Sir: non vada che è tardi, do not go Sir, for it is late: if ſpeaking to more than one, then, non dicano queſto lor altri Signori, non vadano, che è tardi, ſay not this my maſters, go not, for it is late: ſpeaking to an inferior or intimate friend, put the negative particle to the infinitive mood; as, non fare queſti ſpropoſiti che non ti riuſciranno, commit not ſuch abſurdities, they will not fadge; non dir queſto a niſſuno, do not tell this to any body.

L V.

The negative (non) and the pronoun particle, are elegantly put betwixt di, and the infinitive mood, egli fà finta di non mi vedere, he makes as though he ſees me not, inſtead of, fà finta di non vedermi.

L V I.

The gerund accompanied with theſe two verbs, ſtò, I ſtand, or am; vo, I go, is not only proper, but emphatical; as, ſtò ſcrivendo lettere al paeſe, I am writing letters home to my Countrey: vò facendo delle righe, I am drawing of lines, rather than Io ſcrivo al paeſe, or Io fò delle righe.

L V I I.

The gerund uſually hath a noun, or pronoun after it; as, ſapendo lui che è robba di contrabando non dovrebbe comprarne, he knowing that it is a prohibited commodity, ſhould not buy any of it.

L V I I I.

No pronoun particle precedes a gerund, unleſs non precedes the particle; as, non gli dicendo il vero come vuoi che egli ſappia giudicare, you not telling him the truth, how would you have him judge?

L I X.

Eſſendo and havendo are elegantly omitted, both in diſcourſe and writing, and the paſſive particle us'd, which agrees in gender and number with the ſubſtantive; as, fatte le feſte tornerò à ſtudiare, when the holy-days are done, or are over, I'll ſtudy again, inſtead of eſſendo fatte le feſte, the holy-days being ended: fatto pranzo ſarò da voi, when dinner is done or as ſoon as dinner is ended, I'll be with you, or for you, inſtead of havendo, pranzato, having dined: alſo ſubito is elegantly put before the participle, ſubito pranzato andar a dormire è mal ſano, as ſoon as one hath ſupp'd, to go to bed is unwholſome.

L X.

The paſſive particle is elegantly us'd with the conjunction che following the ſame, and the futures havrò, ſarò, I ſhall have, or ſhall be: as, finita che havrò la lettione me n' andrò à ſpaſſo, as ſoon as my leſſon is done, I'll go abroad, inſtead of quando havrò finita la lettione, and the participle may alſo agree in gender with the ſubſtantive or not, it being no error to ſay, finito che havrò la lettione: but the other ſeems more graceful: Alſo the paſſive participle is elegantly uſed after the third perſon ſingular, or plural of the verbs, andare, to go, or venire, to come; as, la leſina non va adoperata nè con maſtri ne con Medici, niggardlineſs ought not to be uſed either with Maſters or Phyſicians: le coſe vanno fatte a queſto modo, things ought to be done after this manner: ſe mi veniſſe fatto, if it ſhould fall out pat for me: ſe mi verranno ſcritte le nuóve, if the news ſhall be written to me.

L X I.

The paſſive participle in compound tenſes of verbs, is uſed without regard to gender or number, if the verb have a neuter ſignification; as, n' ha conſolato quei pochi che ſtavano per diſperarſi, he hath comforted a good many who were like to deſpair: come hà ben capito i noſtri modi di dire, how well he hath apprehended our manner of ſpeaking: mia madre hà infantato hoggi, my mother was brought to bed to day, not infantata: but if the verb have a tranſitive ſenſe, and that the accuſative caſe hath a paſſive dependance from the ſame, then the participle may elegantly agree with the ſubſtantive, in caſe, gender, and number; ho ſcritte queſte lettere a poſta per dar parte a V. S, di quanto è ſeguito qui frà noi, I have written unto you theſe letters, for to acquaint you what hath happened here among us: you may alſo indifferently ſay, ho ſcritto queſte lettere, as already hath been hinted; but if the participle be abſolutely paſſive, and that it come with the verb eſſere, as may appear in the conjugation of the paſſive verb, then the participle agrees in caſe, gender, and number with its ſubſtantive: Io ſono ſcritto al libro, I am ſet down in the book, if a man ſpeak: Io ſono ſcritta al libro, if a woman ſpeak: noi ſiomo ſcritti al libro, we are ſet down in the book, if men ſpeak: no ſiamo ſcritte al libro, if women ſpeak.

L X I I.

The active participle is us'd rather in the nature of a ſubſtantive, than as a participle; as vivente, is rather a perſon, than the act of living: ogni vivente, every living creature: for when we expreſs ſuch a one being living, the gerund in do is uſed; as, vivendo la matrigna con c' è da far bene, the mother-in-law yet living, there's no good to be done; rather than vivente la matrigna: and though it were not an errour in ſyntax, yet it were an error in propriety; and though it may have been uſed, yet it is not imitable.

L X I I I.

Gerunds generally aſſume the nature of noun adjectives; as, Riverendo Padre, reverend Father; ſtupendo penſiero, an admirable conceit.

L X I V.

The gerund many times is accompanied with the prepoſition (in) in paſſando gliene farò motto, as I paſs by i'll give him notice of it; which is as much as, nel paſſare, in the paſſage, or in paſſing.

L X V.

When (ſi) is added or incorporated with any third perſon of any verb ſingular or plural, or to any infinitive mood, the laſt vowel of the ſaid verb is to be omitted; as, ſi dicono are ſaid: diconſi (not diconoſi) da qui può argomentarſi, hence it may be argued, not, argomentareſi; and beſides, the accent never removes from the firſt place, though it be poſition.

L X V I.

Putting pure after any verb, ſpecially in the ſenſe of entreaty or command, you urge and provoke to that purpoſe; as, dite pure il

fatto

fatto vostro, speak but your business, out with it confidently: entri pure, be pleas'd to come in, here is no danger.

LXVII.

These following particles, mi, ti, si, lui, lor, ci, vi, ne, lo, la, gli, li, le, are plac'd properly, immediately after the infinitive, gerund, participle, or imperative of any verb, and not so properly betwixt the preposition, the infinitive, gerund, participle, or imperative; as, per farmi piacere, to do me a pleasure; not, per mi far piacere: facendomi piacere, doing me a pleasure; not, mi facendo piacere: fattomi piacere, having done me a pleasure; not, mi fatto piacere: fatemi piacere, do me a pleasure, use me kindly; not, mi fate piacere, and so consequently of the rest of the specified particles.

LXVIII.

The pronoun participles, mi, ti, si, &c. are more proper to be used than the pronouns me, te, se, except some emphasis or distinction be implied; as, se incolpa d' ogni cosa, he blames himself for every thing: ti chiamo in testimonio, I call thee to witness.

LXIX.

Where the English Interrogations say, whose? Italians say, di chi; as, di chi è quel cavallo? whose horse is that? answer, è del Signor Cavaglier Antonio, Sir Anthonies; or del suo Signor zio, or, your Uncles.

LXX.

The usual questions about distances of place are such, quanto si fà fin a Napoli? how far is it counted to Naples? quanto giornate ponno esser da qui a Loreto? how many days journey can it be from hence to Loreto? in quanto tempo si può mai andar a Venetia? how long, or in how long time can one be going to Venice? answer is made, tante miglia so many miles, tante giornate so many days journey, in tanti giorni, in so many dayes.

LXXI.

With verbs of motion, after the nature of the Latins, in huc, and illuc, we use quà & là; and with verbs of rest quì and lì answering to hic & illic: but the vulgar useth either promiscuously; the best way and the safest is according to the Latins, passa quà, come hither, rather than passa quì: và là, go yonder, rather than và lì: dove è, where is he? è quì, he is here, not quà: è lì, he is there, not là.

LXXII.

The conjunction che is elegantly prepos'd to participles, either when one would bless or curse, che benedette sian le poppe che gli diedero latte, bless'd be the breasts that gave him suck: che maladetto sia il ponto e l' hora che nacque, cursed be the minute or hour that he was born: also che is used for perche, why? but among the conjunctions, the examples will be more ready.

LXXIII.

When che is doubled, it is very elegantly put for what in; as, furono amazzati dieci mila, che in fanti che in cavaglieri, there were ten thousand kill'd, what in foot, what in horse.

LXXIV.

The preposition di, in an expression that implies negation or denial, hath the meaning of avanti, before; as, egli non ritornerà di tre mesi, he will not return this three months, or before these three months be expired: di signifies upon, applied to the day of the week, in domenica, on a Sunday.

LXXV.

When di comes before any word, signifying time or season of the year, it signifies as much as in; di giorno, di notte, in the day time, or in the night time; di state in summer; d' inverno, in winter.

LXXVI.

The preposition in is prefixt to words signifying motion or rest, as, è ito in piazza, he is gone into the place or street: or also it signifies rest, exprest without any article; as, egli è in casa, he is at home, or in the house.

LXXVII.

The negative non is put in answer, when the verb is repeated; as, sete stato a Palazzo; have you been at Court? Non ci son stato, I have not been there: but nò is put in answer, when nothing else follows; volete venire? will you come? answer, nò, not.

LXXVIII.

The preposition per is local sometimes, as, egli camina per Roma, he walks in Rome, or through the streets of Rome; or, camina per la camera, he walks in the chamber, or about the chamber.

LXXIX.

The same preposition serves by way of distribution or division: un piccione per gentilhuomo; every man a pidgeon; un scudo per uno, a crown a piece.

LXXX.

The same preposition, with verbs that imply not motion, signifies as much as in or all over; as, egli si sente una doglia per tutta la vita, he feels an ach in, or all over his body.

LXXXI.

The preposition re of the Latins, in compounds before a single consonant, for the most part changes (e) into (i), as, renovare to renew, rinovare; but before double consonants, it changeth not; as, respirare, to breath; restare, to remain; restituire, to restore; being the same, both in Latin and Italian, except risplendere, to shine; rispondere, to answer; not resplendere, respondere.

LXXXII.

The prepositions in, is, dis, mis, s, added to any active or passive verb, or otherwise to any noun substantive, adjective or participle, the same becometh of a privative sense; as, in-disposto indisposed; is-memorato, forgetful; dis-fatto, undone; mis-credente, an unbeliever; s-facendato, idle, out of employment; yet in some the s doth not make privation, but a gentle position; as, forzare, to force; sforzare, to force the more; correre, to run; scorrere, to over-run.

LXXXIII.

These prepositions (a) to (e) and (ò) or if they come before words beginning with vowels, the (a) receives a (d) the (e) a (t,) or a (d,) the (ò) a (d,) for the pleasantness of pronunciation; scrivo ad Andrea, I write to Andrew; Ad Antonio, and to Anthony; ò lui od alcun altro, either he or some other.

As for monosyllables, as, ci, ne, &c. more may be had in their several places in the Dictionary it self.
